"AN EXAMINATION OF AMERICA'S TURNING POINT"

Part 15

by Pastor Don Elmore

THE SECOND GREAT AWAKENING

THE MESMERIZATION OF CHRISTIANITY

Shortly after the ratification of the Constitution of the United States of America, from the depths of the nether-world, came a mighty force of unclean, evil and demonic entities to seduce the covenant people of God. So powerful has been this onslaught, that in just two hundred years, Christianity has been reduced to a powerless, feminized state religion. Not only has Christianity's doctrines been altered, but the entire Western Christian culture has been turned upside down. Like numerous giant tidal waves, movement after movement has assailed their selves against the laws of America's (Israel's) God.

28. The Mega-Church Movement

In 1800, there was nowhere near the present 30,000 denominations and various cults that masquerade as Christian churches in America.

The major mainline non-Catholic churches included:

1. The Episcopal Church (Anglican)
2. The Lutheran Church (Calvinistic)

3. The Presbyterian Church (Calvinistic)

4. The Congregational Church (Calvinistic)

5. The Baptist Church

6. The Methodist Church

The mainline non-Protestant, non-Christian churches included:

1. The Quaker Church

2. The Shakers

3. The Unitarians

4. The Masonic Temples

And the Roman Catholic Church's influence was limited to the two states of Maryland and Louisiana. The Eastern Catholic Church's influence was nil.

But when the western frontier was opened up after the signing of the Treaty of Paris formally ending the Revolutionary War, a great migration of Americans began that paved the way for some major changes in Christianity. There were two major changes in Christianity. There were two major areas of drastic change that occurred in the early 1800's.

THE FIRST AREA

The first area of change was centered in the area from Maysville, Kentucky to Knoxville, Tennessee. Parts of North Carolina and Ohio also participated in the first major movement of the nineteenth century-The restoration movement.

Kentucky became a commonwealth in 1792; Tennessee became a state in 1796; and Ohio in 1803. The city of Lexington, Kentucky had a population of under 1800. The land of Daniel Boone and Thomas Walker was filled with individualistic, rugged, isolated pioneers who lived a dangerous, difficult life. With the constant threat of attack from savage Indians to the rigors of daily living, the backwoodsmen were basically uneducated and separated from any churches.

And the churches that were on the eastern side of the Appalachian Mountains no longer appealed to this new breed of American who had migrated to the western side. Formal, intellectual sermons with strict, ritualistic services were the last thing the whiskey drinking farmers wanted to sit through.

Thus, the time was right for a new brand of Christianity to make its appearance. And what an appearance it made—sudden and dramatic. While widespread revivals were absent between 1745 and 1795, local awakenings kept the revival flame from completely dying out.

But in 1796, the embers were once again ignited in the hills of North Carolina. The open communal service—a tradition that was brought from Scotland by the Presbyterians—began to be practiced in America. Pastor James McGready organized some of the first. It soon spread to Logan County, Kentucky and several other locations near the border of Kentucky and Tennessee when Pastor McGready moved to Logan County, Kentucky in 1798.

LOGAN COUNTY,

KENTUCKY

Logan County was one of the roughest counties, if not the roughest, in all of the state. “The trouble was that no one on the frontier was designated to enforce the law, with the result that Congress would state, ‘the immunity which offenders experience attracts as to an asylum, the most vile and abandoned criminals, and at the same time deters useful and virtuous persons from making settlements in such society’ (‘Great Revivals and the Great Republic,’ Warren A. Candler, pp.172-173). Logan County attracted so many murderers, horse thieves, highway robbers, and counterfeiters that it was nicknamed, ‘Rogues Harbor’ by the outlaws who fled there to escape justice back east.....

But within a year, revival began to break out” (“From Sea to Shining Sea,” Peter Marshall and David Manuel, pp.60,61, #711 @ $38.50). First it happened at the quarterly communal service at the Red River congregation. Then, the following month as they celebrated the Lord’s Supper at the Gasper River church. A year later at Red River, then Muddy River Church, the Gasper River Church again—similar results.

What happened to these profaned swearers, murderers, robbers, drunks at these communal services defied logic. As recorded by William Chandler in his above quoted book, pp. 178-179, Pastor Barton W. Stone, a Presbyterian pastor from Bourbon County, Kentucky expressed what he saw one of these meetings:

There, on the edge of a prairie in Logan County, Kentucky, the multitude came together and continued a number of days and nights encamped on the ground, during which time the worship was carried on in some part of the encampment. The scene was new to me and passing strange. It baffled description. Many, very many, fell down as men slain in battle, and continued for hours together in an apparently breathless and motionless state, sometimes for a few minutes reviving and exhibiting symptoms of life by a deep groan or a piercing shriek, or by a prayer for mercy fervently uttered. After lying there for hours, they obtained deliverance. The gloomy cloud that had covered their faces seemed gradually and visibly to disappear, and hope in smiles brightened into joy. They would rise, shouting deliverance, and then would address the surrounding multitude in language truly eloquent and impressive. With astonishment did I hear men, women, and children declaring the wonderful works of God, and the glorious mysteries of the gospel.”

Things were happening at McGready’s meetings that had not happened anywhere in America at any church meeting since the end of the First Great Awakening. Word of mouth spread what was happening throughout Kentucky and the adjacent states.

Since there were so few churches, and fewer pastors, Presbyterians, Baptists and Methodists continued to combine their churches in these special outdoor meetings. Besides their church members, other settlers, including both black freemen and slaves, also attended.

The attendees arrived in wagons, by horses, by donkeys, by foot. Thousands came from over a hundred miles away and stayed—for several days at a time. Music, preaching, praying with extraordinary enthusiasms and excitement ... soon gave way to something very strange of the Cane Ridge Presbyterian Church, after attending several of James McGready’s revivals, decided to host one himself at his church.

It came to a climax at Cane Ridge, Kentucky—“ARGUABLY THE MOST IMPORTANT RELIGIOUS GATHERING IN ALL OF AMERICAN HISTORY,” according to Vanderbilt University historian Paul Conkin. Pastor Barton W. Stone

But what happened there, even startled him. Approximately 30,000 people, some travelling hundreds of miles, came to the campground meeting. From Friday to the next Thursday, continuous preaching, prayers, shouting and singing took place with “godly hysteria.”

Bodily exercises, such as dropping, jerking, barking, falling to the ground motionless for hours, uncontrollable weeping, uncontrollable laughing, hugging, kissing, clapping of hands, seeing visions, talking to the distressed, talking to one another, even talking to opposers of the meeting, singing, shouting, rolling on the ground, falling into trances, groans, babble of speech, loud prayers, impassioned preaching, and singing of hymns that had the music with the beat of voodoo drums.

Needless to say, the mainline denominations were shocked and angered at what was happening at the services, but even more so at the decadence that was occurring at many locations in the campground. Drunkenness and disorderly conduct, including sexual intimacies degenerated into that of a mini-Mardi-Gras. It was a common saying that at Cane Ridge, “More souls were begot than saved.”

This week-long ecumenical, multicultural, interracial, festive campground meeting cracked the foundation of Christian theology and Christian culture in America. Esteem for Jesus, expositional preaching, essential Christian doctrine and the practice of church discipline and sanctification of holy communion were quickly thrown away in the land west of the Appalachian Mountains.

Some believe that what happened at Pastor McGready's meetings and at similar ones at Cane Ridge had not happened since the book of Acts. But was that really true? Did those in the Temple Courtyard on the Day of Pentecost and those at Cornelius' house when Peter visited, bark like a dog after they were converted? Were they "slain in the spirit"? Were they laughing uncontrollably? Did drunkards replace the apostles and do some preaching? Was there immoral sexual behaviour going on nearby? Maybe what happened during the Second Great Awakening was a counterfeit revival!

The leadership in the mainstream Presbyterian Church thought that the meetings were unscriptural and as a result that denomination soon thereafter split in two. Calvinism gave way to Arminianism in the frontier states. Church structure, order and sacraments became a thing of the past. But the Methodist and Baptist churches adapted to this "new gospel" and grew exponentially for several decades as they installed "circuit rider preachers" and continued campground meetings.

The Lutheran and Episcopal Churches had little influence in the west. Their intellectual sermons and "Common Prayer Book" services were no match for the more entertaining, socializing, unstructured emotional services of the Baptist, Methodist and Arminian Presbyterians.

THE IMPACT OF CANE RIDGE

The impact of Cane Ridge and the Second Great Awakening was not limited to the realignment among the denominations, but was the catalyst for many more changes in America and the world:

1. New denominations and religions sprang up.
2. An implicit ecumenity.
3. The Circuit Rider came into its own as an institution of the American frontier.
4. Articulation rather than education and a calling from God, became the qualification for a pastor.
5. Music and hymns came to be the way congregations learned theology.
6. Theology became indistinguishable from ethics.
7. The idea of Disinterested Benevolence began to take root.
8. The goal to purify American society and to make it ready for the coming kingdom spurred the formation of various new organizations, such as: the American Bible Society, the American Colonization Society, the American Anti-Slavery Society and many Temperance Societies.
9. Mesmerizing techniques for the new revival meetings were copied, promoted and organized.
10. Emerging dominance of evangelical religion.
11. Growth of the abolition movement.

12. Growth of the women's movement.
13. Emergence of the independence of children against the divinely ordered structure of the family.
14. The emergence of new music with a voodoo beat.
15. The separation of conversion from church membership.

16. The rapid creation of three new denominations:
 - a. The Christian Church.
 - b. The Disciples of Christ.
 - c. The Church of Christ.
17. The creation of a new religion: The Mormon Church.

18. The shifting of the responsibility of taking communion to the individual instead of the church leadership. Offering the holy sacrament to all who attended, whether saved or lost, whether a church member or not became the norm!

19. The urgency of forcing the attendees to make a decision to "accept Jesus." This was prompted because the pioneers were scattered and services irregular due to the lack of churches and pastors in the newly growing west. Who knew when their "opportunity" to be saved would occur again. As a result, the practice of giving an "altar call" or "mourner's bench" became a regular ritual.

20. The emphasis on emotional and social topics and messages, instead of doctrinal and intellectual sermons.

THE SECOND AREA

While the effects of the Second Great Awakening were spreading through the frontier from Ohio to Tennessee, another outbreak of demonic activity occurred in the frontier area of upper New York. Along the newly built Erie Canal, settlers had flocked from their coastal homes. This set the stage for another stage of America's turning from its roots of essential Christian doctrine.

Again, it was from the ranks of the Presbyterian Church that apostasy sprang. After a visit from an evil spirit, the life of Charles Gradison Finney was drastically and suddenly changed in 1821. Within a decade he became a leader of the Arminian Presbyterians and the Arminian Congregational Church—which taught against the Westminster Confession of Faith of the Presbyterians that had ordained him. In fact, Finney became the leader in the movement that promoted abolition and interracial and inter-gender higher education.

From their students at both Lane Seminary in Cincinnati and Oberlin College, outside of Cleveland, Ohio, they led the way to agitate the nation to its most disastrous war of its history. The trend to a socialized gospel mesmerizing techniques had taken root in a new kind of Christianity—a false Christianity—but an increasingly popular one.

SOUTH AFRICA

While Evangelist Finney was being supported by the Tappan brothers for the promotion of their abolition agenda, the Anglican Church of England promoted a similar agenda in the Cape Colony of South Africa. The British government instituted in 1835 radical legislation known as Ordinance 50. It was directed against the immigrants who had come to Cape Colony from France, Germany and the Netherlands (Afrikaners) many years earlier.

These former Europeans and slaves had cultivated and farmed the land inland from the Cape. But these new laws were directed against the laws of the Afrikaners' God. The new civil rights legislation from England demanded that:

1. All policies of racial segregation were to be banned.
2. All Negroes were given full citizenship to vote.
3. Severe taxes were imposed.
4. Prohibition of the Afrikaner's native language.
5. Insane stipulation that any repeal or amendment could only be done in England.

6. No retaliation was permitted to be taken against any Negro who raped, looted or murdered whites.

7. With the support of Anglican missionaries, interracial marriages and interracial schools were advocated.

To prove their "godliness," many Anglican missionaries married Negro women and paraded children of both races under the banner of "we are of one blood."

As a result, with a population less than half of the attended at the Cane Ridge Revival, the Afrikaners abandoned their homes and businesses to make a dangerous Trek many miles by wagons to an uninhabited wilderness far to the Northeast—away from the jurisdiction of the British. Their faithfulness to the laws of God were vindicated with the astonishing intervention of God at the Battle of Blood River that preserved the 464 Afrikaners from total annihilation from the 30,000 Zulu warriors. This ensured that there would be a Christian nation in southern Africa for the next century and a half.

THE WIZARD OF VIENNA AND HIS DISCIPLES

Franz Anton Mesmer (1734-1815) was a French physician who has been called the father of psychotherapy as well as Christian Science, the discoverer of hypnosis, the progenitor of clairvoyance, telepathy and communication with the beyond and promulgated the principle that he could direct the actions and thoughts of his subjects by a magnetic force that emanated from his hands.

An English doctor, James Braid (1795-1860), attributed Mesmer's magnetism to "suggestion," and coined the word "hypnotism" as the word referring to this heightened state of suggestion.

Besides being used in science, this mental manipulation of Mesmer and Braid spread to other areas. Sigmund Freud and Carl Jung developed it into the philosophy of psychotherapy and later psychology and psychiatry.

Mesmerism was developed into a new healing system by Phineas Parkhurst Quimby (1802-1866), a professional mesmerist who felt that many diseases could be cured by suggestion and were therefore essentially illusory. A patient of Quimby's, Mary Baker Eddy, took up his mantle and promoted his teachings as Christian Science.

Others in religion used the tactics of the hypnotists—such as some of the Quakers and Shakers. And many were women. But this should not be a surprise, as Mesmer had observed that women were easier to hypnotize than men.

Therefore, Christianity started on its feminization path when women became leaders in many denominations; founders of new religions and movements: Mary Baker Eddy, Ellen G. White, Elizabeth Stanton, Kathryn Kuhlman ... Tammy Faye Bakker, Joyce Meyers ... until the present where there are many pastors assistant pastors, evangelists, deacons and elders who are women.⁷

Especially prevalent were women in the new churches that came out of the Second Great Awakening. For example: Maria Beulah Woodworth Etter (1844-1924), a leader in early Pentecostalism, was greatly impacted by Quakerism. She became known as the "trance evangelist," the "priestess of divine healing," and the "voodoo priestess."

She was followed by Aimee Semple McPherson (Four Square Gospel Church), whose mantle fell on Kathryn Kuhlman, whose mantle fell on a young immigrant named Benedictus "Benny" Hinn; all of whom masqueraded the "slain in the spirit" as being Christian.

BRAINWASHING IN CHRISTIAN

REVIVALISM

Apparently, Jonathan Edwards accidentally discovered the techniques of mental manipulation during a religious crusade in 1735 in Northampton, Massachusetts. By inducing guilt and acute apprehension and by increasing the tension, the "sinners" attending his revival meetings would break down and completely submit. Technically, what Edwards did was creating conditions that wiped the brain slate clean so that the mind accepted new programming.

The problem was that the new input was negative. He would tell his listeners, "You're a sinner! You're destined for hell!"

As a result, one person committed suicide and another attempted suicide. And the neighbours of the suicidal converts related that they too, were affected so deeply that, although they had found "eternal salvation," they were obsessed with a diabolical temptation to end their own lives.

Once a preacher, cult leader, manipulator or authority figure creates the brain phase to wipe the brain-slate clean, his subjects are wide open. New input, in the form of suggestion, can be substituted for their previous ideas. because Edwards didn't turn his message positive until the end of the revival, many accepted the negative suggestions and acted, or desired to act, upon them.

In campground meetings like at Cane Ridge, with the darkness shattered by candlelight and lanterns, the long hours of repetitive singing, shouting, preaching, etc., providing the cues for group hypnosis that produced the effects of the strange behaviour of the attendees.

Charles G. Finney used similar techniques in his mass religious conversion in New York State. His first step was to work on the emotions of an individual or group until they reached an abnormal level of anger, fear, excitement, or nervous tension. The progressive result of this mental condition was to impair judgment and increase suggestibility. The more this condition could be maintained or intensified, the more it would compound.

Once catharsis, or the first brain phase, was reached, the complete mental takeover became easier. Then existing mental programming could be replaced with new patterns of thinking and behaviour and conversion occurred. It should not be surprising that Finney had the largest church in the United States!

HOW REVIVALIST PREACHERS WORK

Most likely repetitive music will be played while the people come in for the service. A repetitive beat, ideally ranging from 45 to 75 beats per minute (a rhythm close to the beat of the human heart) is very hypnotic and can generate an eyes-open altered state of consciousness in a very high percentage of people. And, once in this state, a person is at least 125 times as suggestible as they would be in full beta consciousness.

The music is probably the same for every service, or incorporates the same beat, and many of the people will go into an altered state almost immediately upon entering the sanctuary. Subconsciously, they recall their state of mind from previous services and respond according to the post-hypnotic programming. Many will exhibit external signs of trance—body relaxation and slightly dilated eyes. Often, they begin swaying back and forth with their hands in the air while sitting in their chairs.

Next, a speaker will usually come out and speak in a patterned, pace style used by hypnotists when inducing a trance. The speaker's voice can sound as if he were talking to the beat of a metronome or it may sound as though he were emphasizing every word in a monotonous patterned style. The words will usually be delivered at the rate of 45 to 60 beats per minute, maximizing the hypnotic effect.

Then, the "build-up" process continues. The announcer begins to generate the excitement and expectations of the audience. Special lighting or a special song effectively increases the intensity in the room.

When an eyes-open mass-induced alpha mental state has been achieved, the collection plate is usually passed throughout the audience. With music in the background, the speaker exhorts the audience to give by maintaining a 45-beat-per-minute voice roll.

Next, the main speaker will come out and induce fear by increasing the tension by talking about fearful subjects. Adding visual cues increases the power of suggestion to those in hypnosis.

In most revivalist gatherings, "testifying" or "witnessing" usually follows the fear-based sermon. People from the audience come on stage and relate their stories. "I was cripples and now I can walk!" Or "I had arthritis and now it's gone!" It is a psychological manipulation that works. After listening to numerous case histories of miraculous healings, the average person in the audience with a minor problem is sure he can be healed. The room is thereby charged with fear, guilt, intense excitement, and expectations.

Now those who want to be healed are frequently lined up around the edge of the room, or they are told to come down to the front. The preacher might touch them on the head firmly and scream, "Be healed!" This releases psychic energy and, for many, catharsis results. Catharsis is a purging of repressed emotions. Individuals might cry, fall down or even go into spasms. And if catharsis is effected, they stand a chance of being healed. In catharsis, the brain slate is temporarily wiped clean and the new suggestion is accepted.

For some, the healing may be permanent. For many, it will last four days to a week, which is, incidentally, how long a hypnotic suggestion given to a somnambulistic subject will last. Even if the healing doesn't last, they come back every week, the power of suggestion may continually override the problem or sometimes, sadly, it can mask a physical problem which could prove to be very detrimental to the individual in the long run.

The techniques and staging will vary from church to church. Many use "speaking in tongues" to generate catharsis in some while the spectacle creates intense excitement in the observers. The use of hypnotic techniques by the religions is sophisticated, and professionals are assuring that they become even more effective. Power sound systems, the proper use of lighting and music that has the hypnotic beat of voodoo or repetitive singing, have become of primary importance in inducing an altered state of consciousness in many church sanctuaries.

DANGER IN THE CHURCH

Historical documents and research have assured us that pagan rituals were almost always accompanied by loud repetitious music, chanting, and dancing. The whole idea was to place the priests or the dancers into a hypnotic state through which demons could enter and help them perform supposedly supernatural tricks.

Repetitious rhythms, lyrics, and simplistic melodies are conducive to produce hypnosis. Advanced states of hypnosis are typical of most of the cults and mega-churches. It's only when one surrenders control of their higher, logical emotionally-controlled mind that false doctrine can be introduced into the subconscious. When one reads the doctrinal statements of these cults and false religions, many of the statements are ludicrous and laughable. How could anyone in their right mind believe that stuff? But they are not in their right mind.

Logical human beings can be programmed to do illogical things and accept illogical doctrine through hypnotic techniques. The rhythmic, repetitious chanting—with or without music—overrides the conscious mind and feeds thoughts, beliefs, and often a call to action to those being conditioned.

The repeat of the revivals of the Second Great Awakening in our lifetime—the so-called "Toronto Blessing" and the so-called revivals of the Pensacola, Florida Brownsville Pentecostal Church—used the same techniques used in Islam, Buddhism, Hinduism, Taoism, Shintoism, Catholicism, African tribal religions, Voodoo, Santaria, Macumba, Polynesian religions, New Age religions, American Indian ceremonies, the Second Great Awakening, etc.

Today, many rallies, revivals, and worship services are getting their attendees “high” by over stimulating the endocrine gland system, and in particular the adrenal glands. This high is often mistaken for a state of higher spiritual awareness. This aroused emotional state is being passed off as a sure sign of the Holy Spirit. A phony physical (partly mental) spiritual high is mistaken for a manifestation of the Holy Spirit and spiritual growth.

Unfortunately, once pastors, worship leaders, congregations, and even denominations, start down this slippery path, it’s hard to turn around. People get hooked on the experience and the high. Old fashioned worship practices seem dull and uninteresting. They are too low-key, subdued. Not enough excitement. Got to go where the “excitement” is, because that’s where Jesus is! False reasoning, satanic deception.

The danger of “Christian rock” music is more dangerous than most people think. It will almost guarantee that false doctrine will be harder and harder to eliminate from God’s people in the future.

THE NEW JESUS: A NEW AGE DEITY

The first and cardinal rule in the New Age is simply this: “Believe in any god and in anything, but do not claim that your god, or your belief, is exclusive.” That is, as long as you accept that all is one and that your religion is no better than the next person’s, then you qualify to be a New Ager. It does not matter whether you worship a Hindu guru, your own Higher Self, the group, or a pagan deity from ancient Rome, Greece, or Babylon.

The second rule of all New Age cults and religions is simply this: God is what you or whom you personally wish him (or her, or it) to be. You make up your own god.

The third rule is that the laws, statutes, and judgments of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, which were given by Him to His people, are now no longer relevant in today’s world. Other laws and statutes must be used in order for this world to achieve peace and prosperity.

SUMMARY

The discovery of the techniques of hypnosis were utilized in many multi-day camp meetings in the Restoration Movement in the early 1800’s to mesmerize the rough, sinful, un-churched frontiersmen. However, throughout the last two centuries, the methods have been refined and enhanced to the point that they are now regularly used by not only human potential seminar lecturers, self-help program leaders, Eastern religion gurus, special military forces commanders, political leaders, advertisers, entertainment performers, health care workers, but also many televangelists, revivalists, “healers” and mega-church preachers.

“What was once relegated to the ashrams of cults is now replicated at the altars of churches. Whether they are referred to as Hindu gurus or Holy Ghost bartenders, the methods they employ have much in common. They all work subjects into altered states of consciousness, use peer pressure to conform them to predictable patterns, depend heavily on arousing people’s expectations, and abuse the power of suggestion to make subjects willing to accept virtually anything that enters their minds.

Cynics may write off the use of altered states of consciousness, peer pressure, expectations, and suggestive powers as mere socio-psychological manipulation, but Christians perceive an even more significant threat—these techniques are fertile soil for satanic and spiritual deception.

While leaders of the Counterfeit Revival enslave devotees through hypnotic schemes, leaders of genuine revival enlighten disciples through Holy Scripture” (“Counterfeit Revival,” Hank Hanegraaff, pp.16, 17).

THE SABBATH MARK

“Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.” (Ex 20:8)
by Pastor Dave Barley
Some Christian denominations like the Seventh-Day

Adventists claim that violators of the day they believe is the true Sabbath, Saturday, have the mark of the beast, especially Christians who worship on Sunday. Many Seventh-Day Adventists claim that Sunday-Sabbath keepers have received the “mark of the beast,” which they claim comes straight from the Roman Catholic Church. They claim that Constantine in 321 AD changed the Sabbath through the Catholic Church’s claim that Peter was the first Pope or Bishop of the Roman Church. But they can’t see the forest for the trees. I believe that the first-day of the week Sabbath position has strong Biblical support in the following verses from Leviticus 23:15-16 which state:

“And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven sabbaths shall be complete: Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number fifty days; and ye shall offer a new meat offering unto the LORD.”

This has to do with Pentecost and the “first day of the week.” These verses provide the Biblical and lawful bases for Sabbath worship on the “first day of the week.” It commemorates Jesus’ resurrection, and I believe replaces the Old Covenant Sabbath. Jesus arose on the “first day of the week,” thus ushering in the New Covenant. Certain things did change, and what Jesus did and accomplished became the reason for these changes and to celebrate the liberty we now have in Jesus. Yes, I know that what I said is blasphemy to those who hold Saturday as something sacred, but at least follow along so you can fully understand what you think you already disagree with. Proverbs 18:13 states:

“He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him.”

Fifty days after the Feast of Firstfruits, the feast of Pentecost occurred. The feast of Firstfruits was fulfilled by Jesus in His Resurrection. He was the “firstfruits from the dead.” According to the verses we were reading, the day after the Sabbath began the seven Sabbaths count down for a total of 49 days. Verse 126 says, “the morrow after the seventh sabbath” shall be the number of fifty days, or the day of Pentecost. On the feast of Pentecost, which was the “first day of the week,” the Holy Spirit was poured out on those who gathered together in the upper room (Acts 2:1). This is the basis for which the Apostle Peter (whom the Catholic Church claims to be the first Pope, but he most certainly was not!) is said to have declared the “first day of the week” to be the Christian sabbath. What we do know for certain, is that Sunday was observed by Christians as their sabbath for over 300 years before Constantine made it a law. Think about it. The fact that Constantine made Sunday a sabbath law really proves nothing. There was no Roman pope ruling over Christians for centuries, and yet, Christians kept Sunday as their sabbath. Even the Adventists admit that the papacy did not come into power until 538 AD, a full 217 years after Constantine made the law. By the fourth century, Christians were already accustomed to worshipping on Sunday according to The New International Encyclopedia, and the Emperor Constantine merely confirmed the already established Christian custom by a law of the state. In “The Ante-Nicene Fathers,” Theophilus, pastor of Antioch, in 162 AD said the following: “Both custom and reason challenge us that we should honour the Lord’s Day, seeing on that day it was that our Lord completed His resurrection from the dead.”

It was on the basis of the verses we just read in Leviticus 23:15-16 concerning the Sabbath that the “first day of the week” was upheld by Christians. Also, Pentecost represents the church age.

Does Sunday represent the first day of the week (the Lord’s Day), and is Sunday the fulfillment of the law as stated in Leviticus 23? You be the judge. In the ten volumes called, “The Ante-Nicene Fathers,” many of these early Christian Fathers of Christendom wrote about Sunday and openly supported the day as the Christian Sabbath. Irenaeus in 178 AD stated the following: “The mystery of the Lord’s resurrection may not be celebrated in any day other than the Lord’s day and on this alone should we observe the breaking of the Paschel Feast ... Pentecost fell on the first day of the week, and was therefore associated with the Lord’s day.” many new things transpired because of the New Covenant, and we all had better say Halleluyah and Amen to that, otherwise, we are all dead in our sins. We are under grace today. We do have the gifts and fruit of the Holy Spirit available to us. We do have Salvation through Jesus the Anointed. We do have a greater promise through the New Covenant. Concerning His New Covenant, He will write His Law upon our hearts, and we no longer have to beat each other upside our heads to prove how legalistically correct we may be. On this 50th day, verse 16 states, “and ye shall offer a new meat offering unto the Lord.”

Today under the New Covenant, we are the “new meat offering unto the Lord.” We are to be new creatures in Jesus Christ, and set free from the curse of the law by His precious shed blood whereupon He paid the full price for our sins. In Romans 5:8, the Apostle Paul tells us, “But God commendeth his love toward us [Israelites], in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.” It is scriptural blasphemy to claim otherwise, and would be an affront to our precious Saviour Jesus Christ. Also, with regard to the Sabbath, this is one area where the Scriptures specifically tell us not to judge one another. Colossians 2:16-17 states:

“Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.”

This should not be a secret to any Christian that we are no longer under the Old Covenant. We are under the New Covenant through Jesus Christ. We are no longer under the letter of the law, but the spirit of the law which Jesus quoted in Matthew 12:1-4 when He and His disciples were hungry on the sabbath and they went through a nearby cornfield to pluck off corn for them to eat. The Pharisees didn’t like it and accused Jesus of violating the sabbath, but Jesus reminded them of David and his men going into the temple on the sabbath and eating the shew bread. Jesus spoke to them about the spirit of the law which they knew nothing about. They only understood the letter which killeth, but it is the spirit which maketh alive.

Under the New Covenant, Jesus is responsible for writing His law within our heart. In the spirit of the law, “The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath. Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.”

(Mark 2:27,28).

Pastor Earl Linville (himself a former Saturday-sabbath keeper), in his book Why I no Longer Observe Saturday as a Day of Worship (#921 @ $3.25ppd), he states on page 3, "According to the Bible and ancient Hebrew Calendar, the first day of the year was a sabbath and then every seventh day after it was a sabbath. The phrase "seventh day of the week is NOT in the Bible. It was merely six days of work, one day of rest. Sabbath means "cessation, stop, rest." The command was to work six days, then rest."

He goes on to explain:

"Studying ancient calendars and encyclopedias will reveal that Saturday was Babylon's "Sabbath." Furthermore it is believed by many that this Saturday sabbath was probably incorporated into the Jewish religion during their 70-year exile there, and the approximate 500 years they had to build their "mixed" religion of Babylonish and Hebrew, before the appearing of the Messiah."

[(note by Dave Barley): In other words, Sunday may very well be the true Sabbath of Israel. Saturday was Babylon's day, but when Jesus came, he took the opportunity to use the first day of the week events to correct, or set the sabbath for that time forward. He fulfilled Pentecost, Tabernacles, and Passover. His resurrection began a New Covenant Age and Sabbath. Only when this age is complete, and Jesus has fully written His law within our heart, will man be able to fully enter into His Rest.

Saturday is known as the Jewish Sabbath. Sunday is known as the Christian Sabbath. The Bible tells us in Exodus 31:17, "It (the sabbath) is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed." Christian Israel for the most part has kept Sunday as their Sabbath and it is a Biblical sign fulfilled, or is God Almighty a liar? I think not!

Returning to Pastor Linville's book: "As we will eventually see, the Bible establishes the first day of the week as the Christian Sabbath. And yes, it comes every seventh day after six days of work. Merely saying "seventh day" does not prove a Saturday sabbath. This is something that I (and MANY others) have been guilty of assuming as I look at our present day Calendar. I, and other Saturday keepers have subconsciously and mentally inserted "of the week" behind "seventh day," when as I said, the phrase 'seventh day OF THE WEEK' is NOT in the Bible. Not even in Genesis at the creation."

We know that Jesus rose on the first day of the week (Mark 16:9). Christians are recorded three times assembling on the first day of the week, after the resurrection and before His ascension, never on the (Jewish) sabbath: (John 20:19, 26; Acts 2:1). Please note that these were worship services. Jesus even gave the Apostle John the vision of the Revelation on the first day of the week (Rev. 1:10). It is amazing to me that the Seventh-Day Adventists and other people elevate the sabbath issue to the most important of commandments in the Bible. They name themselves after this commandment and harp on this commandment constantly, when the Bible clearly tells us that the most important commandment is for us to "love the Lord our God with all our heart, mind and soul."

The favourite book of the Seventh-Day Adventists to promote is called "NATIONAL SUNDAY LAW," by A. Jan Marcussen which in my opinion rates right alongside Judeo-Christian fiction books like "The Late Great Planet Earth," or "Left Behind." This NATIONAL SUNDAY fiction hype turns the sabbath issue into the mark of the beast issue, claiming that those "sacred" people who "honor God's Sabbath" (which again, they claim to be Saturday), will be hunted down by the Sunday Sabbath keepers and mercilessly slaughtered, or beheaded. THIS BOOK IS UTTER HOGWASH, and their claim about the "mark of the beast" being Sunday worship is UTTER HOGWASH!

The book does have some accurate dates and historical events about the Catholic Church and its beast activity, but with the slant that the author puts on those events. For instance, it speaks of the 1260 years of the Papacy's rule in which you would think that during those years, the Papacy selectively sought and killed and tortured violators of the "Sunday Sabbath," but that was certainly not the case. If Sunday Sabbath was the issue for the persecution of Protestants, there would be abundant evidence. Yet, for 1260 years of power, the Catholic Church did not persecute over the sabbath issue, but over its own claim of selective salvation through the Roman Church. The Saturday/Sunday sabbath debate was not even a consideration for 1260 years.

You would think, according to this book, that the sabbath issue would be the number one law they would "kill for."

The Seventh-Day Adventists claim that observance of Sunday as the Sabbath is paying homage to the Catholic Church and that those who do so are bringing themselves under the authority of the Pope. Sunday they say, is an institution of the Roman Catholic Church, and that those who observe the day are in reality observing a commandment of the Catholic Church. Well, to follow that logic, anything Biblical that the Pope of the Catholic Church commands, that is also followed by Protestants, is somehow evil? I don't think any holy spirit led students of the Word are that naïve! Personally, I think it is a seriously weak argument given by the Seventh-Day Adventists concerning Saturday simply based upon the claim by the Catholic Church that they changed the sabbath day. The Catholic Church makes all kinds of claims about rituals, worship of Mary the mother of Jesus, Vatican authority, communion, salvation, and so forth. Does their claim make something right, or even true? Certainly it doesn't!

Origen, a great scholar and theologian, in his commentary on John from "The Ante-Nicene Fathers," about 200 AD, wrote that John the Baptist was "born to make ready for the Lord a people fit for Him, at the end of the Covenant now grown old, which is the end of the Sabbatic ... it is not possible that the rest after the Sabbath should have come into existence from the seventh of our God; on the contrary, it is our Saviour who, after the pattern of His own rest, caused us to be made in the likeness of His death, and hence also of His resurrection." Victorinus, another of our early church fathers (in The Ante-Nicene Fathers, in the section "On The Creation of the World.") in 300 AD stated: "On the Lord's Day we may go forth to our bread with giving thanks. Lest we should appear to observe any Sabbath with the Jews, which Christ Himself, the Lord of the Sabbath ... in His body abolished."

Ignatius of Antioch (surnamed Theophorus) a disciple of the Apostle Peter, who appointed him bishop of Antioch advocated replacing the Old Covenant sabbath with the Lord's Day:

"If then those who had walked in ancient practices attained unto newness of hope, no longer observing Sabbaths but fashioning our life also arose through Him and through His death which some men deny - a mystery whereby we attained unto belief, and for this cause we endure patiently, that we may be found disciples of Jesus Christ our only teacher" — Ignatius to the Magnesians 9.1, Lightfoot translation.

Lastly, although there are many others, Eusebius, the "Father of Church History," stated in "The Ante-Nicene Fathers," in the section "The Ebionites," that these Ebionites (who had claimed that Jesus was just the fruit of intercourse of a man with Mary) held to the Jewish "Sabbath" (page 159) while others "like us they celebrated the Lord's Day as a memorial of the resurrection of the Saviour." Eusebius also stated according to Finis Dake in his book, God's Plan for Man, "From the beginning Christians assembled on the first day of the week, called by them the Lord's day, for the purpose of religious worship, to read the Scriptures, to preach and to celebrate the Lord's Supper ... the first day of the week on which the Saviour obtained the victory over death. Therefore, it has the pre-eminence, first in rank, and is more honourable than the Jewish Sabbath."

If you carefully read the above paragraph, you no doubt noticed what was said about the Ebionites, and that they claimed Jesus was not (the Son of) God, but mere man.

Listen, no matter what you believe concerning the Sabbath issue, I can guarantee you this, that whether you hold the right position or not, your doctrinal perspective will not grant you salvation or a higher position in the Kingdom of Heaven. The truth of the Sabbath is that Jesus Christ is the Lord of the sabbath, and the Scriptures command us to enter into His Rest. If you are in Christ and you rest in His Word and promises, you are in keeping with the true Sabbath. In closing, let us all please be mindful of these words from Romans 14:5,

"One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."

NEW BIBLES?

A new Bible version, the Wycliffe Hawaii Pidgin New Testament has been created for the dumb and dumber. This "bible" if you can call it a Bible, after they are through with DUMBING IT DOWN, is Black Creole slang. Below is a familiar Bible passage from John 3:14-18 from this Pidgin New Testament:

"You know, long time ago inside da boonies, Moses wen put one snake on top one stick so everybody can see un an come good. Da same ting gotta happen to me, Da Guy Dass Fo Real. Dey goin put me on top one cross, so dat everybody who stay trus me, can get da real kine life dat stay to da max foeva. God wen get so plenty love an aloha fo da peopo inside da world, dat he wen send me, his one an ony Boy, so dat everybody dat trus me no get cut off from God, but get da real kine life dat stay to da max foeve. you know, God neva send me, his Boy, inside da world fo punish da peopo. He wen send me fo take da peopo outa da bad kine stuff dey doing. Whoeva tay trus me, God no goin to punish dem. But whoeva no trus me, garans God goin punish dem, cuz dey neva trus me, God's ony Boy."

Friends, I do not believe that the above needs any further comment from me. I'm sure that you can fill in what I think about this all by yourselves. Talk about making the Word of God of none effect!!

THE WITCHCRAFT OF THE NARNIA CHRONICLES

I am writing this urgent message because very soon our children here and elsewhere in the world are going to experience a bewitching and a deceptive occult indoctrination. On December 9th, 2005, a new Disney movie will be released entitled "The Chronicles of Narnia." The movie is based on the book by C.S. Lewis entitled The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe. It is a sad fact that mainstream "Christianity" esteems C.S. Lewis as a great "Christian" author and his writings as edifying with profound themes of "Christian" teachings. The C.S. Lewis books can be found in "Christian" bookstores everywhere, and even Dr. James Dobson's Focus on the Family organization is offering and promoting the works of C.S. Lewis. These same books, however, can also be found in occult bookstores everywhere!

As a former witch, astrologer, and occultist who has been saved by the grace of God, I know that the works of C.S. Lewis are required reading by neophyte witches, especially in the United States and England. This includes The Chronicles of Narnia, because it teaches neophyte, or new witches, the basic mindset of the craft. Isn't it strange, though, that many "Christian" churches and organizations have used The Chronicles of Narnia as Sunday School curriculum?

When I saw the release date of this new movie, I was not surprised. December 9th is the 13th day before the witches' quarter-sabat of Yule. The full cold moon is midway between the release date and the sabat of Yule. The waxing moon is also directly on the equinox on the release date of the movie. This is far too precisely occultic to be coincidental, and the producers of the movie no doubt consulted upper-level witches regarding the perfect day to have the "Chronicles of Narnia" open.

The author of The Chronicles of Narnia, Clive Staples Lewis, was a professor at Oxford University in England where he was supposedly converted to "Christianity" by another Oxford professor named J.R.R. Tolkien. Tolkien and Lewis would often sit together at a local pub or tavern and converse about their beliefs in the creatures and the activities of the middle earth, a strange realm of a little people and magical powers. Tolkien often referred to Lewis as a "reluctant Christian." Tolkien, though, was a Roman Catholic in doctrine and found his religion to be perfectly compatible with magic and the world of hobbits and elves.

The story of the Narnian Chronicle known as The Lion, The Witch, and the Wardrobe, is one of clandestine occult mysticism and is not Sunday School material unless your Sunday School is a defacto witch coven. The story involves a child from the normal everyday or mundane world. This girl, Lucy, who hides in a wardrobe as she is playing a game, suddenly finds herself transported to another world very unlike her own. It is a world of intelligent, talking animals and strange creatures. The little girl soon finds herself having tea with a faun. In witchcraft and ancient Roman pagan mythology, a faun is any of a group of rural deities, which have the bodies of men and the horns, ears, tails, and legs of a goat. The Roman god Faunus was also the god of nature and fertility and was connected to sexual lust. Here let it be noted that in the Narnian Chronicle Prince Caspian, this same strange land and the little girl finds herself in is also populated by gods and goddesses; such as Bacchus, the god of drunken orgies, and the Maenads, who were frenzied women driven to madness in the orgiastic cult of Bacchus.

The main character of the book is a lion named Asian, which is the Turkish word for lion. Asian the lion is the character that "Christian" teachers say is the Christ figure, but witches know him to be Lucifer. The lion, Asian, appears in all seven of the books of The Chronicles of Narnia. The following are quotes regarding Asian the lion:

"At the name of Asian, Lucy got the feeling you get when you wake in the morning and realize it is the beginning of spring."

"When he bares his teeth, winter meets its death; and when he shakes his mane, we shall have spring again."

"He'll be coming and going; one day you'll see him and another you won't."

"It was a lion, huge, shaggy; and bright it stood facing the rising sun."

"Asian swings his head around scattering golden gleams of light as he does so."

"Remember, Asian the lion is esteemed to be the "Christ figure" by so many "Christian" teachers, but with that in mind, consider the following quotes from The Chronicles of Narnia:

"The crowd and dance round Asian (for it had become a dance once more) grew so thick and rapid that Lucy was confused. She never saw where certain other people came from who were soon capering among the trees. One was a youth, dressed only in a fawn skin, with vine leaves wreathed in his curly hair. His face would have been almost too pretty for a boy's, if it had not looked so extremely wild. You felt, as Edmund said when he saw him a few days later, 'There's a chap who might do anything, absolutely anything.' He seems to have a great many names - Bromios, Bassareus, and the Ram were three of them. There were a lot of girls with him, as wild as he. There was even unexpectedly, someone on a donkey. And everybody was laughing; and everyone was shouting out, 'EUAN, EUAN, EU-oi-oi-oi.'"

Those strange words EUAN, EUAN, EU-oi-oi-oi are an ancient witches' chant used to invoke the power and presence of the god of drunkenness and addiction, who is named Bacchus. But wait, as the story goes on, it gets worse as the witchcraft increases and becomes more obvious. Consider the following: "'What is it Asian?' said Lucy, her eyes dancing and her feet wanting to dance. 'Come children,' said he, 'Ride on my back today.' 'Oh lovely!' cried Lucy, and both girls climbed on to the warm golden back as they had done no one knew how many years before. Then the whole party moved off - Asian leading. Bacchus and his Maenads leaping, rushing and turning somersaults, the beasts brushing round them, and Silenus and his donkey. bringing up the rear... Then three or four Red Dwarfs came forward with their tinder boxes and set light to the pile, which first crackled, and then blazed, and finally roared as a woodland bonfire on midsummer night ought to do. And every-one sat down in a wide circle around it. Then Bacchus and Silenus and the Maenads began a dance, far wilder than the dance of the trees, not merely a dance for fun and beauty (though it was that too), but a magic dance of plenty, and where their hands touched, and where their feet fell, the feast came into existence. Sides of roasted meat that filled the grove with delicious smell, and wheaten cakes and oaten cakes..."

The above is clearly a description of a witches' sabbat of Midsummer or the Summer Solstice, and it is described as such in perfect detail. Certainly by now enough is known to denounce this work as satanic and antichrist.

Was Clive Staples Lewis a Christian or a blasphemer? In his book The World's Last Night and Other Essays on pages 98-99, Lewis said, "Assuredly, I say to you, this generation will by no means pass away till all these things take place ... certainly the most embarrassing verse in the Bible. The one exhibition of error and the one confession of ignorance grow side by side. That they stood thus in the mouth of Jesus himself and were not merely placed thus by the reporter, we surely need not doubt... The facts, then, are these; that Jesus professed himself (in some sense) ignorant, and within a moment showed that he was really so."

Lewis also said in Reflections on the Psalms, page 129, "... as I believe, Christ... fulfilled both paganism and Judaism." Lewis was also quoted in a biography as follows: "I had some ado to prevent joy and myself from relapsing into paganism in Attica At Daphni it was hard no to pray to Apollo the Healer. But somehow one didn't feel it would have been very wrong - would have only been addressing Christ sub-species Apollinis."

In closing this urgent message, I pray that our true and dear Lord Jesus Christ will have mercy on the deceived and sleeping remnant, and that they will come fully awake and rise up against this subtle attack of adversaries. the apostle Paul warned us in 2 Cor. 11:14-15 as follows: "And no marvel; for the adversary is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if their ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." ["and in that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of hosts." Zec 14:21].

May God help us all, and may He especially protect our children from witchcraft in the churches is our prayer.

AMERICA: THE LAND OF THE DEAF, THE DUMB AND THE BLIND

by pastor Chuck Kuhler, B.S., M.Th.

I am not utilizing the aforementioned terms in a derisive or derogatory manner to those who may be physically handicapped, but rather I am referring to those millions of Christian Israelites in this land of ours who are mentally and spiritually deaf, dumb, and/or blind.

Before considering these conditions, it would be wise to look at the definitions of these terms so that we may have a better understanding.

DEAF: (1) unable to hear; (2) refusing to listen.

DUMB: (1) without the power of speech; (2) bereft of the power of speech temporarily; (3) that which does not speak or is little addicted to speaking.

BLIND: (1) lacking the sense of sight; (2) unable or unwilling to try to understand; (3) not controlled by reason; (4) not possessing or preceding from intelligence; (5) lacking all awareness.

I have used italics to indicate those parts of the definitions which I feel are perhaps most applicable. I fully understand that the "remnant" reading this tract are cognizant of the matters which I will present herein, but this message very likely is applicable to your friends and family who may appear blissfully unaware of the coming judgment of the Almighty. Are you fulfilling your role as a watchman in accordance with Ezekiel 33:6?

Over the years, since Roe vs Wade, we have witnessed more than fifty million babies being murdered under the guise of abortion. Sadly, the vast majority of these babies have been Israelite babies. We don't see foreigners and strangers (non-Israelites) having a great number of abortions. After all, more babies means more public assistance.

Our Israelite people, whether they like to acknowledge it or not, are under the Law. Those who say the Law was "nailed to the cross" are in serious error. The only thing nailed to the cross were the "ordinances," mostly pertaining to the animal sacrifices - since the Lamb of God was slain for us - there is no need for further blood sacrifices, And our people are deaf, dumb, and blind.

Violent crime (murder, rape, physical assault, armed robbery, etc.) continues to escalate throughout the country and the U.S. Justice Department statistics indicate one such type of crime occurs every four minutes somewhere in the nation. The growth of Hispanic and Oriental gangs in the past decade had been epidemic with senseless initiation-type murders, car-jackings, home-invasions, drive-by shootings, etc. It has reached the point where those who are supposed to protect us are in fear for their own lives. And while our people may appear to be concerned, they are in truth, deaf, dumb, and blind.

While the Scriptures are very clear on homosexuality, (Lev. 18:22, 20:13, Rom 1:24-28, et al), we have in the past two decades witnessed an explosion in the open flaunting of such decadent behaviour. Prior to that time, these sodomizers dared not parade their disgusting acts in public. Today they have parades in our major cities and special "queer" weekends at "theme parks," and "resorts" and they openly demand "their rights" to do so. In addition, we have elected politicians who openly admit that they are "gay" and who continue to be re-elected by their mainly Israelite constituents. And our people, while they may disapprove, are deaf, dumb, and blind. Our God is not mocked! Judgment cometh!

Have you noticed the tremendous growth in pornography, in all forms - print, movies, television, etc. that is sweeping the country? And it is not all "adult" in nature but it is expanding into the area of intimate acts of child porn. Notice if you will the heavy involvement of the Talmudists in these endeavours. And our people, some of whom subscribe to this filth are deaf, dumb, and blind.

We are literally being invaded today by tens of millions of aliens and strangers from all of the third world countries of the world. These illegals bring into our nation sickness, filth and disease and non-Christian (Israelite) traits and living conditions. We have been informed in Scripture that we shall not "put a stranger over thee," and yet today we don't seem to understand this admonition. If our political leaders would listen to, and abide by the Word of God, illegal immigration would cease immediately. Miscegenation is on the increase (and will get worse, especially in another generation or so, when you can't tell them apart anymore!) and why would we expect anything else? Read the history of our people! And yet, most of our people are deaf, dumb, and blind to what our God states with regard to this.

Our so-called "excellent" system of public education is costing hundreds of billions of dollars every year to achieve nothing better than mediocre or failing grades and dumberdown graduates. According to the U.S. Dept. of Education, almost 46% of the students who graduate from high school are considered "semi-literate." We have allowed the humanists, the AFT and the NEA, and dare I say, the "satanists" to take over our schools. We have "outlawed" school prayer, and removed God from our schools. Yet, even though parents clamor for more educational resources, they are deaf, dumb, and blind to the many shortfalls. Is it any wonder that many of our people have commenced "home schooling." From about 1,000 children twenty-five years ago, home-schooling now numbers almost 8 million children.

As a nation, we have expended huge sums in the "wars" - the war on poverty, the war on drugs, etc., and we have obviously LOST all of these. Drugs and Poverty are still with us, and more so than ever.

We have exported our manufacturing and industry in the name of corporate greed. Our manufacturing is now done in Thailand, Japan, Ecuador, Guatemala, Nigeria, Cambodia, Peru, India, Pakistan, China, and other nations in Africa and South America. Just look at the labels on most all of the products you buy. We have become an "information" and "service" society! We are a destitute nation who has given our God-given resources to third-world nations (stop giving aid to the nations which only love us for what we give them!) that despise us. And our people, and our leaders are deaf, dumb and blind to the consequences.

We have no morality and ethical levels of conduct left. We see the corruption and greed running rampant among our leaders. We have more lawyers in this nation than all the rest of the world combined. Contrary to Scripture, we have become a "suing" people. And our people for the most part are deaf, dumb, and blind as to what the Word of God says.

We have expended hundreds of billions of dollars in aid and support to the ungodly Talmudists. We are even now involved in the war in Iraq at a cost of 2,000+ of our sons, fathers, husbands, mothers, sisters, and brothers. I would like to pose to President Bush, the question asked by Jehu, son of Hanani, of King Jehoshaphat of Judah long ago: "Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord? Therefore is wrath upon thee from before the Lord." (2 Chron 19:2). And the Fundamentalists and Evangelicals and many from Protestantism are deaf, dumb, and blind. The Zionists reject Jesus Christ, and such conduct was unheard of fifty years ago.

Our churches for the most part have become hollow, empty and Godless buildings. Many of the pastors, ministers and priests follow the traditions of men over the Word of God. Materialism governs the established church. The pastors, ministers and priests are supposed to be teaching the Kingdom message, but many have no idea of what the Kingdom message is. There are some who deny the "virgin birth" of our Saviour as mere fiction. There are others who question the truth of the resurrection without which there is no salvation for Israel. There are others who see nothing wrong with some-sex marriage. There are some who are practising homosexuals and lesbians. For many of the clergy, it is a career, and not a heartfelt commitment to work for the LORD our God. And our people follow these blind leaders and deaf, dumb, and blind to what the Scriptures say.

We are a sick and troubled nation! We are a sick and troubled people!

We are deaf. We don't want to hear about such unpleasant things as I have mentioned in this article. We are mentally and spiritually unwilling to hear.

We are dumb. We don't want to use the power of speech to speak out on the critical and important issues that we face as a people and a nation. We prefer not to get involved.

Some may think that we are religious extremists or kooks, or at best religious intolerants. Remember, whatever the issue, if it conflicts with the Word of God, we have both the duty and the responsibility, and the right to speak out. Use the power of speech!

We are blind. We don't want to see what is going on all around us. Many do not want to search the Scriptures to find out what God has to say about some issue. When you know the truth, you have to react in accordance with the Word, or pay the price of disobedience, and isn't that price SIN? You cannot merely pay lip service to God. God is not mocked!

We have had the "blessings" as stated in Deuteronomy 28:1-14, and now we have progressed to the "curses" section of verses for disobedience. Read this chapter of Scripture and compare what we have been and what we are today.

There does appear to be somewhat of an "awakening" on the part of our people today as they question some of the concerns that I have enumerated herein. And surely, the ultimate solution to all of our problems is to follow the instructions contained in that famous verse of 2 Chronicles 7:14. Amen

OVERPRAISED CHILDREN

The Fallacy in Feeding our Youth's Self-Esteem
by Joel Hilliker

"I am even more amazing than I thought." "Today I will remind myself that I am a marvel." These syrupy "thoughts for the day," found in the book Today I Am Lovable: 365 Positive Activities for Kids, represent a myth that infects modern child rearing and education. This false idea, intended to help our children, actually damages them.

What is it? That praise is not just the best, but in fact the only, motivator for children. This idea saturates children's programs and interactive toys and games. When a child does something right, rather than a simply "That's right!" they say, "Wow - you're really SMART!"

American schools in particular emphasize self-esteem as the chief virtue, divorced from achievement or even effort. Thus, children are routinely trapped in a sunny fantasy world in which bad behaviour and poor performance have no negative consequences.

The kernel of truth in this myth is that children grow up and perform best in a positive environment—that an enduring climate of criticism can be withering. Of course we want our children to be confident, well-adjusted and happy. But overpraise is not the way to get them there.

In a book called 'The Feel-Good Curriculum: The Dumbing Down of America's Kids in the Name of Self-Esteem,' Maureen Stout pinpoints several destructive myths that have taken root in our educational system—including: high expectations damage self-esteem; evaluation is punitive, stressful and damaging to self-esteem; discipline is bad for self-esteem; effort is more important than achievement; it is the teacher's, not the student's, responsibility to ensure learning.

Let's face facts: High self-esteem is wildly overrated.

Repeated studies have proven that bloated self-worth doesn't improve a child's academic performance, strengthen his interpersonal relationships, help him avoid self-destructive behaviour or translate into adult success. In fact, it often hinders a person in all these areas. Is this any surprise? A child raised on the notion that he is a marvel—just as he is—has no motivation to improve.

Stout makes a strong case that these ideas, which infect our public schools from kindergarten through college, lead directly to narcissism (pre-occupation with self), detachment from one's community, rejection of absolute truth, and cynicism. She also shows a correlation with the dumbing down of curricula, grade inflation, loss of motivation (among teachers as well as students), an unmerited sense of entitlement and the ridiculing of critical thinking skills.

Do we really want our children thinking, "I am even more amazing than I thought"? As one educator put it, who in the world wants to hang out with someone who thinks like that? Studies have shown that self-esteem can actually become self-delusion—a conviction that you are more popular, more capable, more loved, than is really the case. Such self-centered attitudes only alienate other people. At the same time—almost paradoxically—the overpraised child can be addicted to approval from others. Children who are taught self-worth with no link to personal achievement generally face crushing shocks when reality finally comes knocking, challenging their artificially high opinions of themselves. As we approach adulthood, praise dries up; life's trials get tougher. The overpraised child, having long been shielded from small failures, finds sudden, big failures overwhelming.

When we look at this issue spiritually, we really see its sinister side. The originator of the self-esteem movement are the adversaries of our people. They pump up our carnal nature with egomaniacal attitudes. In other words, our children already get enough training in loving themselves above all others without any prodding from misguided educators and overeager parents.

God, eminently aware of our vain proclivities, filled His Bible with warnings against flattery and insincere praise like these: "... a flattering mouth worketh ruin" — "A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet" (Prov. 26:28, 29:5). In Psalm 49, God spells out "the fate of those who have foolish confidence" (verse 13, RSV), and it isn't pretty.

That's not to say that praising our children is wrong, of course. We should think on what is praiseworthy and commendable (e.g. Phil. 4:8). But empty, indiscriminate praise means nothing. Children should receive sincere, specific praise when appropriate. When they scrawl out a crayon picture of clouds, "That's gorgeous!" is less meaningful—and less truthful—than something along the lines of, "I like how you're using different colours," or, "Wow—you're learning how to draw on paper what you see outside."

Such conversations also lend themselves more to your giving gentle guidance on how to improve the next time. Handled correctly, constructive criticism won't make our children flinch. We want them to accept it as a boon to personal growth and a crucial part of life. Loving correction, graciously received, is one of life's greatest gifts. That is a lesson even our children can begin to understand.

Rather than trying to inject our children with self-worth, we need to help them see reality—the way God helps His children. And reality is this: You are a child. As you strive, you grow. You have much yet to learn. But I love you, and always will—even when you fail—as long as you never give up.

Consider: It is only when we recognize our own inadequacies that we can see the need to seek God's help to live the right way—the way that will bring happiness. As Jesus Christ told us, "Without me ye can do nothing"—clearly the opposite of self-worth. In the end, our children will need to recognize, deep in their heart, that, like all human beings, they can do nothing without God!

.... from a letter by Dan Gentry....

"... it is illegal to homeschool in Germany, and several Christian families have been criminally prosecuted for it, so are sending their children to Switzerland, Austria or Belgium, rather than allow their lambs to be exposed to a pernicious curriculum including "sex education" wherein they (gradeschoolers) are instructed in the use of condoms, and requested to engage in "masturbation fantasy" exercises, among other things. And you thought Amerikan public education was bad? By the way, have you noticed the pandemic use of the expression "kids" instead of children? It is a pet peeve of mine, correcting the serpent-bred misuse of English. If one used the German (kind(er) (children), that would be understandable. However, it is no accident that animal analogies would make YOUR offspring into goats, rather than lambs (sheep). I think you get the spiritual significance of this!....."

HOMOSEXUAL 'COUPLES' TO GET NEW TEMPORARY VISA 'RIGHTS'

Homosexuality has received another endorsement from the federal coalition government and we need to challenge the Immigration Minister for this bad decision.

Amanda Vanstone announced what she called a "long-awaited reform to immigration laws"—allowing skilled migrants applying for temporary visas to bring their same-sex partners to Australia.

Who has 'long-awaited' this? Homosexuals and doctors, according to the homosexual paper Sydney Star Observer [9/03/2006]. But the homosexual lobby have not just been 'awaiting' this, they have actively lobbied.

What have the [homosexual] doctors been saying? "The existing rules were deterring much-needed GP's from moving here."

Just how many homosexual GPs are there wanting to come here? The Sydney Morning Herald reported last year a British doctor with a same-sex partner decided against a job in a Sydney practice because of the immigration rules. SSO said two other overseas doctors apparently refused work in Sydney because they could not easily bring their homosexual partners.

3 doctors - are we changing the rules as of July 1 for 3 doctors? And who is really pushing for this? Sen. Vanstone told SSO, "As Immigration Minister, I was determined to ensure that there were no barriers within my area of responsibility to filling these shortages."

The homosexual lobby stated, "It's the single largest area of reform that we've been campaigning for over a decade," and urged the Immigration Department to recognize same-sex partners of permanent skilled migrant applicants as well

A spokesperson for Sen. Vanstone told SSO that the Minister was likely to extend the changes to students and other categories of skilled migrants before the end of the year!

ACTION: Please write to Senator Amanda Vanstone, Prime Minister John Howard and your House of Representatives member. Ask them to reverse this decision - and not to extend it. This is a social change to appease a very small minority. Address: Parliament House, Canberra, ACT 2600

CULTURAL WARFARE by Charlton Heston

Actor Charlton Heston, born October 4, 1924, was one of some performing artists who received the Kennedy Center honors on December 6, 1997. Mr. Heston remained in Washington D.C. and addressed the 20th Anniversary of the Free Congress Foundation and the 4th Birthday of the NET TV network. The following are excerpts from his insightful remarks. Mr. Heston and Mrs Heston celebrated 50 years of marriage in 1994.

CHARLTON HESTON ON AMERICA

A cultural war is raging across our land - storming our values, assaulting our freedoms, killing our self-confidence in who we are and what we believe. (Mr. Heston then asked those present who owned a gun to raise their hand).

I wonder how many of you own guns but chose not to raise your hand? How many of you considered revealing your conviction about a constitutional right, but then thought better of it?

If so, you are a victim of the culture war being waged against traditional American freedom of beliefs and ideas.

DISCLAIMER

The videos mentioned or offered herein are copied from TV or from other tapes, and we believe they contain valuable information. We have no personal acquaintance with the speakers, nor is it our purpose to endorse the speakers personally. Nor do we necessarily agree with everything they say. Rather, we are interested in the news stories and the insights they share ... often at risk to their own careers and their personal safety.

You have been assaulted and robbed of the courage of your convictions. Your pride in who you are and what you believe has been ridiculed, ransacked, and plundered! It may be a war without a bullet or bloodshed, but with just as much liberty lost: You and your country are less free!

Because you choose to own guns—affirmed by no less than the Bill of Rights—you embrace a view at odds with the cultural war lords. If that is the outcome of cultural war, and you are the victims, I can only ask the obvious question. What will become of the right itself? Or other rights not deemed acceptable by the thought police? What other truth in your heart will you disavow with your hand?

Rank-and-file Americans wake up every morning, increasingly bewildered and confused at why their views make them lesser citizens. The message gets through; Heaven help the God-fearing, law-abiding, Caucasian, middle-class Protestant - or even worse, evangelical Christian, Midwestern or Southern - or even worse, rural, apparently straight - or even worse, admitted heterosexual gun-owning or even worse, NRA-card-carrying, average working stiff - or even worse, male working stiff - because, not only don't you count, you are a down-right obstacle to social progress. Your voice deserves a lower decibel level, your opinion is less enlightened, your media access is insignificant, and frankly, mister, you need to wake up, wise up, and learn a little something from your new-America and until you do, would you mind shutting up?

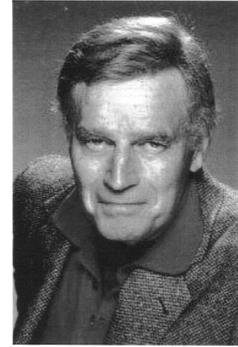

That is why you didn't raise your hand. That's how cultural war works. That's what happens when a generation of media, educators, entertainers, and politicians-led by a willing President - decide the America they were born into isn't good enough anymore. So, they contrive to change it through cultural warfare of class distinction! Ask the Romans if powerful nations have ever fallen as a result of cultural division. There are ruins around the world that were once the smug centers of small-minded, arrogant elitism. It appears that, rather than evaporate in the flash of a split atom, we may succumb to a divided culture!

The Constitution was handed down to guide us by a bunch of wise old dead white guys who invented our country! Now some flinch when I say that. Why? It's true - they were white guys! So were most of the guys that died in Lincoln's name opposing slavery in the 1860s. So why should I be ashamed of white guys? Why is "Hispanic Pride" or "Black Pride" a good thing, while "White Pride" conjures shaven heads and white hoods? Why was the Million Man March on Washington celebrated by many as progress, while the Promise Keepers March on Washington was greeted with suspicion and ridicule? I'll tell you why, Cultural Warfare!

You don't see other Hollywood luminaries speaking out on this do you? It's not because there aren't any. It is because they can't afford the heat! They dare not speak for fear of CNN or the IRS or the SAG or NBC! It saps the strength of our country when the personal price is simply too high to stand for what you believe in. Today, speaking with the courage of your convictions can be costly, the price of principle can be so high that legislators won't lead and citizens can't follow, and so there is no arm to fight back. That's cultural warfare!

Mainstream America is counting on you to "draw the sword" and fight for them. These people have precious little time and resources to battle misguided Cinderella attitudes, the fringe propaganda of the homosexual coalition, the feminists who preach that it is a divine duty for women to hate men, blacks who raise a militant fist with one hand while they seek preference with the other, New Age apologists for juvenile crime who see roving gangs as a means to only the merchandising violence as a form of entertainment for impressionable minds, and gun bans as a means to only the Lord-knows-what. We have reached that point in time when our social policy originates on Oprah.

It's time to pull the plug!

A BLACK TSUNAMI

Since the fifties of the last century a black tidal wave has been rolling down Africa all the way from the north to the south with total destruction in its wake. Africa has become a country of beggars. The latest tragic example is the old Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe. That once beautiful and prosperous country is in chaos and a massive famine is beginning to take its toll. It is because the white farmers have been driven off their farms, many have been murdered. The same is beginning to happen here in South Africa. Once beautiful and productive farms are lying waste and overgrown with weeds. Africa with all its wealth and potential is destroyed and is just waiting to be occupied by the eastern nations, especially China.

The same is busy happening to Europe. The recent riots in France are a typical example. The non-white nations are in the process of taking over Europe. I was shocked when I read that Berlin had more non-whites than whites. Recently a Moslem was seen standing on the pavement in one of the British cities holding up a poster with the words ISLAM WILL DOMINATE THE WORLD written on it. These foreign elements are claiming the same rights as the citizens of their host countries. It is because we in the West are still clinging on to the lie of the "noble savage" which obtained its footing during the French Revolution. It is high time we begin to realise that there are two groups of people on earth. There is the group, always in the minority, which brought order, civilization and progress to the world, and the other group, always in the majority, who are just parasites and have produced nothing. It is high time that we become proud of our own identity once more. (excerpted)
